

one of his scholars, and a young lady at that," said Mr. Ford, gravely, as he took the rifle from the hands of the half-amused, half-reverent girl. "It's quite safe with me, and I promise I shall deliver it into Mr. McKinstry's hands and none other."

"Perhaps it wouldn't be as likely to be given to you as it would if one of us carried it," murmured Mrs. McKinstry, confidentially, glancing at her daughter, smilingly unconscious of the presence of a third party.

"You're quite right," said the master, composedly, throwing the rifle over his shoulder and turning toward the door. "So I'll say good afternoon, and try and find your husband."

Mrs. McKinstry constrainedly plucked at the folds of her coarse gown. "You'll like a drink of coffee, won't you?" she said, in an ill-concealed tone of solicitude. "I'll get my manners. Cressy, fetch out that demijohn."

"Not for me, thank you," returned Mr. Ford smiling. "Oh, I see—you're temperance, naturally," said Mrs. McKinstry with a tolerant sigh.

"Hardly that," returned the master. "I follow no rule, I drink sometimes—but not to day."

Mrs. McKinstry's dark face contracted. "Don't you see, now?" struck in Cressy quickly. "He either drinks sometimes, but he doesn't use whiskey. That's all."

Her mother's face relaxed. Cressy slipped out of the door before the master, and preceded him to the door. When she had reached it she turned and looked into his face.

"What did maw say to yer about seemin' me not to use?"

"I don't understand you."

"To your seemin' me and Joe Masters on the trail?"

"She said nothing."

"Humph," said Cressy, meditatively. "What was it you told her about it?"

"Nothing."

"Then you didn't see us?"

"I saw you with some one—I don't know whom."

"And you didn't tell maw?"

"No, I did not. It was none of my business."

He instantly saw the utter inconsistency of this speech in connection with the reason he believed he had in coming. But it was too late to recall it, and she was looking at him with a bright but singular expression.

"That Joe Masters is the conceitedest fellow going," I told him you could see his foolishness."

"Ah! indeed?"

Mr. Ford pushed open the gate. As the girl still lingered he was obliged to hold it a moment before passing through.

"Oh, we couldn't quite hitch on to you not drinkin' beer," she reckoned, "you're like everybody else about yer. That's where she slips up on you. And everybody else, I kalklate."

"I suppose she's somewhat anxious about your father, and I dare say is expecting me to hurry," returned the master, pointedly.

"Oh, don't all right," said Cressy, mischievously. "You'll come across him over you, in the clearing. But you're looking right purty with that gun. He kinder sees you off. You oughter wear one."

The master smiled slightly, and "Good-by," and took leave of the girl, but not of her eyes, which were still following him. Even when he had reached the end of the lane and glanced back at the rambling dwelling she was still leaning on the gate with one foot on the lower rail and her chin cupped in the hollow of her hand. She made a slight gesture, not clearly intelligible at that distance. It might have been a mischievous imitation of the way he had thrown the gun over his shoulder. It might have been a warning.

The master, however, continued his way in no very self-satisfied mood. Although he did not regret having taken the place of Cressy in the girl's conduct, not clearly intelligible at that distance. ## CONQUEST OF CANAAN.

LESSON VI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 11.

Text of the Lesson, Josh. xiv, 5-15—Commit Verses 10-11—Golden Text, Ps. xxxvii, 3—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Condensed from Lesson Helper Quarterly, by permission of H. S. Hoffman, Philadelphia, publisher.)

After the defeat of Israel at Ai, because of the sin of Achan, then followed the discovery of the transgression, and the putting to death by stoning of Achan and all his family, and the burning by fire of the stolen silver, gold and garment and all that belonged to him in the valley of Achor. This wrath was turned away from Israel, and then, at the Lord's command, all the men of war went up against Ai and took it, and the rest of the history is a succession of great victories, until thirty-one kings have been slain and their cities destroyed.

5. "As the Lord commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land." Although there remained yet very much land to be possessed (xiii, 1, 5), it had all been conquered and divided, and it only remained for each tribe now to fully possess its own territory which had been assigned to it. How slothful and disobedient they were in this matter is hinted at in ch. xviii, 3, and more fully described with its results in the book of Judges. Israel's rest in this respect are but pictures of our own, who are believers in Jesus Christ have been made by virtue of His merits children of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, and we ought to have perfect rest and peace and manifest in our lives that we have fellowship, real, joyous and soul satisfying, with the Father and the Son by the Holy Spirit. Now how many Christians do we know who seem to live as children of a King, restful, happy, peaceful, and having constant victory over all enemies, as if they really lived in Canaan?

6. "The children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal." It was from Gilgal, where the reproach of Egypt had rolled away, that Joshua set out on all those victorious expeditions (v, 9; ix, 6; x, 7, 9, 15, 43) teaching us that if we would have constant victory we must ever go forth believing that there is no condemnation to them that are in Christ.

7. "Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, the Kenazite." We are first introduced to him in Numbers xii, 3, as one of the twelve spies, and in that and the following chapter as the one who with Joshua brought a good report and encouraged the people to go right up and possess the land. The testimony of the Lord concerning him is "My servant, Caleb, who followed me fully." (Num. xiv, 24)

8. "I brought him word, as it was in mine heart." Probably the son also brought Moses word as it was in his heart; the difference was in the hearts of the ten and the two. Joshua and Caleb believed God and were ready to obey Him; the other ten did not believe God and consequently disobeyed Him. "I do well to regard him as looking with such undivided attention that he shall fill all our soul's vision and we shall see 'Jesus only.' Thus we shall be strong in the Lord and help to make others strong."

9. "The land wherein thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." This was the promise on which he had lived for forty-five years, we find it referred to in Lev. i, 32; he was evidently fully persuaded that it would in due time be fulfilled. Thus all the worthies of Heb. xi believed God and waited patiently for the fulfillment of His promises, are waiting yet, for it is written that they did in faith, not having received the promise, but that they without us shall not be made perfect, and now until His time shall come will come, with the promised inheritance be theirs and ours. (Heb. xii, 27-29; xii, 13, 14, 16)

10. "The Lord hath kept me alive as He said." All power is His, who is the faithful promiser, and because of His faithfulness, none of His promises shall fail of all that He has promised; all shall be fulfilled; and it shall all be as He says. Blessed are they that believe, for they shall be filled with joy and peace. (John, xxi, 25; Rom. xv, 13)

11. "I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me." How grand to hear this old man of 85 thus talking about his strength for war, nothing daunted by the difficulties before him, but relying upon and rejoicing in the Lord, in whom he trusted, he felt as young and strong as he did forty-five years before.

12. "Give me this mountain—the Lord with me, I shall be able to drive them out." Although the cities were great and fenced, and there were giants there, he heeded it not, but believing that nothing was too hard for the Lord, in whom he trusted, and on whom he relied, he asks Joshua for this mountain.

13. "Oh, for a faith like this, which reckons not on one's own strength, but on the strength of an Almighty One who says: 'I am with you always, and all power is given unto me in heaven and on earth.'"

14. "Joshua blessed him." Confidence in God always brings a blessing, and one that is real and lasting. Blessed is the man that trusts in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is. He sent His angel and delivered His servants that trusted in Him. No manner of hurt was found upon him, because He believed in His God. Blessed is the man that believes, and yet have believed. (Jer. xvi, 7; Dan. iii, 28; vi, 23; Lu. i, 45; John xi, 26)

15. "And gave unto him a land for an inheritance." Hebron is one of the most interesting spots in all Palestine; it is about twenty miles south of Jerusalem, and about the same distance north of Beersheba. There Abram dwelt and built an altar unto the Lord after Lot was separated from him; there Sarah died, and Abram bought the grave of Sarah in which to bury her; there Isaac journeyed and died; there it was that Jacob buried Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, Jacob and Leah, and at this very day the place is most sacredly guarded, so that a stranger cannot enter its precincts nor look into it. (Gen. xii, 13; xxiii, 2, 19; xxxv, 27-29; xlii, 31; i, 13)

16. "Because he fully followed the Lord God of Israel." Not only in the world to come, but very often in this present world, is there a great reward to those who follow the Lord even in this dispensation, but we must wait for the next one before we can hope to inherit the earth, for it is still under the curse, an evil world, and not fit for a holy people, in it we are still to expect much tribulation. Notwithstanding the curse which abounds on every side and in every way, we may however have great peace and wonderful foretastes of glory if we will only like Caleb, follow the Lord fully, and not afar off, as Peter did before he denied his people, in it we are still to expect much tribulation. Notwithstanding the curse which abounds on every side and in every way, we may however have great peace and wonderful foretastes of glory if we will only like Caleb, follow the Lord fully, and not afar off, as Peter did before he denied his people, in it we are still to expect much tribulation.

17. "Study the following texts upon following Joshua: Matt. ix, 19; i, 9; vii, 32; xvi, 24; xii, 31; John i, 43; xii, 20; xxi, 19, 22.

SMASH-UP AT PITTSFORD.

The Morning Train Runs Into a Horse and Wagon, Killing the H. man.

A young man late on Saturday evening hired a horse and wagon of Mr. Hosmer to drive to the furnace, but went to a house near the depot, where he stayed awhile. On resuming his journey he evidently got mixed on the road, for the horse went through the woodshed and down the track to the first culvert south of the depot. After crossing it, he waited patiently, as the tracks show, until the night train going north about four p. m. struck and killed the horse and smashed the wagon into kindling wood. In the meantime the young man, about 12 o'clock, returned to Mr. Hosmer with the report that the horse was lost in the creek somewhere. After putting the young man, who was somewhat bruised, to bed, Mr. Hosmer started to find his team, but was unsuccessful until word was brought him by one of the section men that his horse was killed, and the hat of the driver was found in the water close by; but they were unable to find the driver. The train, very fortunately, had slowed up to leave a passenger at the station, and was but little damaged.

Personal.

Mr. N. Frohnsdalen, of Mobile, Ala., writes: "I have great pleasure in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, having used it for a severe attack of Bronchitis and Catarrh. It gave me instant relief and entirely cured me and I have not been afflicted since. I also beg to state that I had used other remedies with no good result. Have also used Dr. King's New Life Pills, both of which I can recommend."

Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, is sold on a positive guarantee. Trial bottles free at Beaupre &amp; Lowrey's Drug Store.
